

KING GEORGE V EXTENSION FIELD

Design Influence

The history of Nailsworth, including production of shoddy in the nearby Spring Mill informs the design to include vibrant and colourful wildflower meadow grasses. Using existing published policies and guidelines as inspiration, a planting palette of grasses and shrubs would comprise native species local to the area. Wildflower meadows blend with mown grass footpaths, creating gentle and natural walkways throughout.

Natural Play

Timber balance beams, stepping stones, logs and boulders together create a natural play experience, providing children the opportunity to challenge themselves, and grow with nature. Adventure trails would run throughout the site, encouraging exploration.

Aesthetic Value

In order to preserve views across the open valleys to the north and east, the park would be kept predominantly open, with a layout designed to complement the existing scenic quality of the surrounding area, and in keeping with the unique landscape character of the Cotswolds AONB.

Education and Community

An accessible, attractive space appealing to all ages encourages exercise and provides a social gathering and recreational ground for members of the local community.
